#FeministClimateJustice

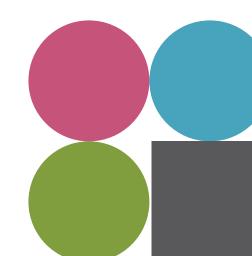

The project is funded under the Community Climate Action Programme: Climate Education, Capacity Building and Learning by Doing (Strand 2) through the Department of Environment Climate and Communications.

Climate justice means that while reducing carbon emissions we are also reducing social inequalities, creating a fairer and more just world in the process

Feminist climate justice pays attention to the gendered and intersectional characteristics of all dimensions of climate justice

'those that cause the least of the climate crisis are the most affected, with the least resources to respond' Amplify the voices of women and marginalised communities most impacted by climate crisis

Advocate and influence policy with women and marginalised communities

Mobilise communities to support and learn from one another, with the establishment of the Feminist Communities for Climate Justice National Network

Strengthen capacity & raise consciousness of those working with or active within women's and marginalised communities through Community Work in a Changing Ireland Certificate Programme in partnership with the Department of Applied Social Studies at NUI Maynooth; and the development of toolkits for communities and community workers

Why this project?

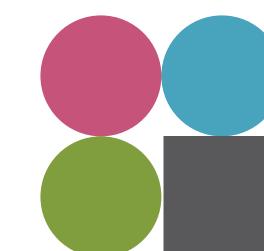

Responding to community workers – climate impacts coming, but a need for more information, guidance and tools

Responding to data and policy gaps – existing climate policy does not adequately pay attention to the domestic gendered impacts of the climate crisis

For a feminist analysis of climate justice

Response to National Women's Council members who wanted climate justice integrated in the Council's work

why women?

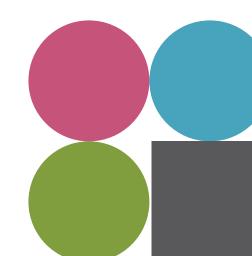

Impacts of the climate emergency worsen existing social and economic inequalities – including gender inequalities

Gender Pay Gap: 9.6% Gender Pension Gap: 35% Women do twice as much unpaid care work

Care work is key to how women experience & are impacted by the climate crisis and are linked to food, energy, transport choices & security

Most Irish women consider car ownership a necessity to carry out caring duties and to alleviate safety concerns with public transport

Why women?

Excluded from the economy and work in unpaid caring or domestic roles which impact transport use and vulnerability to transport poverty and injustice

Women face huge barriers in access to employment, key resources and public services including housing and health

Disproportionately represented in deaths related to air pollution

Care and support work - vital and inherently low-emissions work, must be a key part of the just transition

Marginalised women are particularly affected

Women's voices must be central – those most impacted by the climate crisis need to be at the centre of decision-making spaces.

Why a feminist community work approach?

Addresses and tackles the root causes of inequality and climate injustice – system change, not climate change

Cares – it champions caring work, paid and unpaid, and calls for it to be appropriately valued and recognised as green work

Transforms consultation into meaningful, non-tokenistic participation in decisionmaking

Focuses on the issue of women's representation in decision-making as well as other marginalised groups – those most impacted by the climate crisis need to be at the centre of decision-making spaces

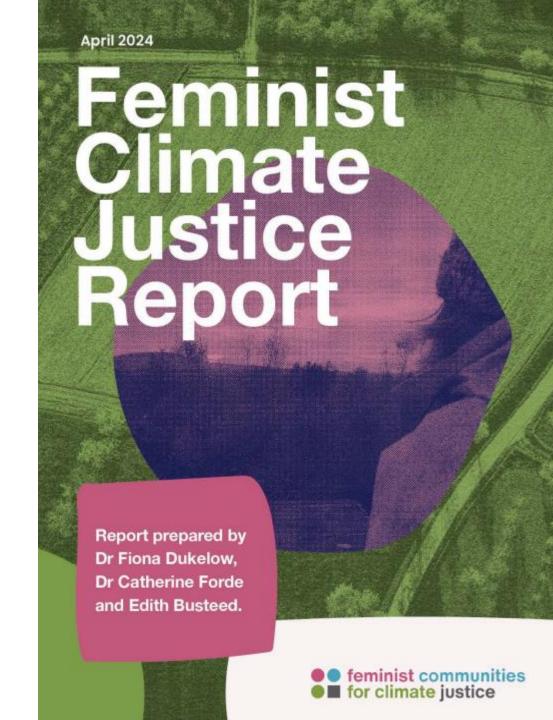

Champions a collective focus – we must fight for the many, not the few

Means better public services which benefit both people and planet!
